

A Call (to Ordained Ministry) in the Wild

Your offerings help plant the seed for faithful and courageous leadership through ELCA outdoor ministries.

Kristina Waters was just one year short of graduating as a marketing major from the University of North Dakota. But she responded to the call to ordained ministry and soon found herself studying at Luther Seminary in St. Paul, Minn. Kristina is now an intern at St. Paul Lutheran Church in Kodiak, Alaska.

In retrospect, this makes perfect sense: Kristina was raised Lutheran, took part in outdoor ministry from sixth grade on, served four years on staff at a camp. In college, Waters was a student deacon in campus ministry who met with other student leaders Wednesday nights and helped lead worship on Sundays.

Waters was not alone in her consideration to attend seminary. Her childhood friend from camp, Brandy Solper, was also considering seminary, but had not told anyone until the two talked. Brought together by the grace of God, the two enrolled together!

As seminarians, the two benefit from the $9 million in general mission support that is shared with 8 ELCA seminaries. Although there are still significant costs involved for seminarians, mission support is one way the ELCA is raising up faithful, wise and courageous leaders.

To learn more about where your mission support dollars are shared, visit www.elca.org/stewardship/interpreting.html

A Call (to Ordained Ministry) in the Wild

Your offerings help plant the seed for faithful and courageous leadership through ELCA outdoor ministries.

Kristina Waters was just one year short of graduating as a marketing major from the University of North Dakota. But she responded to the call to ordained ministry and soon found herself studying at Luther Seminary in St. Paul, Minn. Kristina is now an intern at St. Paul Lutheran Church in Kodiak, Alaska.

In retrospect, this makes perfect sense: Kristina was raised Lutheran, took part in outdoor ministry from sixth grade on, served four years on staff at a camp. In college, Waters was a student deacon in campus ministry who met with other student leaders Wednesday nights and helped lead worship on Sundays.

Waters was not alone in her consideration to attend seminary. Her childhood friend from camp, Brandy Solper, was also considering seminary, but had not told anyone until the two talked. Brought together by the grace of God, the two enrolled together!

As seminarians, the two benefit from the $9 million in general mission support that is shared with 8 ELCA seminaries. Although there are still significant costs involved for seminarians, mission support is one way the ELCA is raising up faithful, wise and courageous leaders.

To learn more about where your mission support dollars are shared, visit www.elca.org/stewardship/interpreting.html